This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION.

In offering this volume to the public, the compiler is well aware that in many lines it is incomplete, and that there must be, of necessity, occasional errors in dates and names. As to the former, it is well known to all genealogists that the dates found on town records frequently differ from those contained in family Bibles, or given on gravestones; in some cases, two or even three varying dates for the same event have been furnished by different members of the same family; in such instances the responsibility of deciding which had the greater weight of evidence in its favor has necessarily fallen upon the compiler, and it can hardly be supposed that no errors have been made in reaching the conclusions given. In the spelling of names some apparent discrepancies will doubtless be observed; these are due to the fact that the form used by the family itself has been followed. Even in the same family different members have occasionally used different spelling of their family name.

The material for the foundation of the work was largely gathered by the late John Goodwin Locke; the notes which he left at the time of his death, in 1869, being collated by Capt. Nathaniel Goodwin, who brought down the line of descendants of Dr. Lazarus LeBaron,[2] the second son of Francis,[1] quite fully, to the year 1872.

In 1897, at the initiative of Edmund S. and James W. Clark, the compiler of this volume assumed the work of bringing the record down to date, picking up, as far as possible, the many lost threads in the lines of the other sons of Francis[1] — James[2] and Francis.[2] In carrying out this labor many members of the LeBaron family have rendered important aid by their kind and ready response to many and repeated inquiries; the compiler would express appreciation of the great help received in the way of suggestions as to arrangement, as well as for information furnished, by the printers of the book; thanks are due to Mr. Frederick Dielman for his kindness and courtesy in allowing the use, for the frontispiece, of a copy of his etching, "A Colonial Wedding," which represents the marriage of Francis LeBaron and Mary Wilder. The Rev. Calbraith B. Perry, D. D., has kindly permitted the use of plates of pictures of Ann (Bradford) DeWolf, Mary Ann (DeWolf) Perry, and of the Bradford House in Bristol, R. I.

Some information which was received too late for insertion in its proper place, would gladly have been included had it been possible without disarranging the plan of the work. Valuable assistance has been rendered by Mr. Harry G. Botsford, Mrs. Frances E. Bovie, Miss Sarah Bradford, Lemuel LeB. Dexter, Esq., Miss Isabella Eldridge, Mrs. Helen L. Goodwin, Mrs. Catherine E. Hedge, Mr. Isaac N. LeBaron, Miss Mary A. Richardson, Mrs. Clara J. Sampson, Mr. Benjamin Shurtleff, Jr., Mrs. Jessie F. Stalker, Mrs. Ella G. St. Dizier, and Mr. James LeB. Willard.

Mrs. Hepzibah G. Emerson, Miss Frances E. Murray, Mrs. Sarah S. Norton, and many others showed their interest in various ways, in the early years of the work, but have not lived to see its completion.

The "History of Hingham" says: Widow Martha Wilder, mother of Edward, probably came from Shiplake, Oxfordshire, England. Edward Wilder was a soldier in the war against King Philip. The author of the "History of Hingham" calls Anthony Eames "of Marshfield." See also Barber's "Hist. Colls.," p. 506, "Hingham."

time of his marriage with Mary Wilder, of Hingham. His gravestone on the "Ancient Burial Hill" in Plymouth, now in good preservation, marks the date of his death and age, and gives the latter as thirty-six years. Substantially the same tradition in regard to him has been handed down in the various branches of his family, namely, that a French privateer, fitted out at Bordeaux and cruising on the American coast, was wrecked in Buzzard's Bay. The crew were taken prisoners and carried to Boston. In passing through Plymouth, the surgeon, Francis LeBaron, was detained by sickness, and on his recovery performed a surgical operation so successfully that the inhabitants of the town petitioned the executive, Lieutenant Governor Stoughton, for his release, that he might settle among them. The petition was granted, and he practiced his profession in that town and vicinity until his death.

In regard to his religious faith there are different opinions: some have claimed that he was a Roman Catholic, while others are just as strenuous in declaring that he was of a Huguenot family. It is possible that both claims are right, as, for a long period preceding 1696, the severest affliction of the Huguenots was due to the abstraction of their children and youth from their homes, to be educated in the Roman Catholic faith.

We think best to express no opinion in regard to this matter, but place in the Appendix various statements and notes which have come to our attention, leaving each one interested to draw his own conclusions.

Lazarus LeBaron studied medicine with Dr. Mackay, a Scotch physician of Southampton, L. I., about 1718. He practiced his profession in his native town, Plymouth, and through the surrounding country, and was for many years one of the Selectmen of that town.

WILL OF LAZARUS LEBARON.

In the name of God amen. I Lazarus LeBaron, of Plymouth in New England, physician, being in health and of a disposing mind and memory, blessed be God for it, think it my duty to dispose of the estate God has given me, and accordingly do dispose of it as follows: — But first, I give my soul to God, hoping and believing thro merits and righteousness of Jesus Christ, my dear Redeemer, to find acceptance with him; my body I commit to the dust to be decently buried at the direction of my executors hereafter named, hoping for a glorious resurrection. As to my worldly substance I give and bequeath as follows, that is to say after my just debts and funeral charges are paid by my Executors:

Imprimis. 1. My will is that all my wearing apparel, woolen or linen, be equally divided to and among my sons, namely Lazarus, Bartlett, Isaac, Lemuel, Francis and William.

2. I give to my son Lazarus all that is due to me from him on books or notes of hand for money or moneys I have paid for him, also one-fifth part of all my medicines, these, with what he has already had, to be accounted in full of his part of my estate.

3. I give to my son Bartlett LeBaron the house and land where he now dwells, which I bought of Thomas Mayhew, Esq., which was Capt. Gould's, with the widow's third after her death: also the piece of land adjoining the other street, which I bought of Father Wait: also a piece of woodland I bought of David Morton, containing 33 acres lying between . . . . . , the bounds of said lands by the deeds will more fully appear: also I give him all that is due to me from him on book or notes of hand, etc., which is in full of his part of my estate, including what he has already had.

4. I give to my four daughters, viz.: — Lydia Goodwin the widow of Nathaniel Goodwin dec'd, Mary Bradford the wife of Dr. Bradford of Bristol, Hannah Goodwin the wife of Benjamin Goodwin of Boston, Elizabeth Robbins wife of Ammi Robbins of Norfolk in Connecticut, four-fifth parts of all my medicines in my shops, to be equally divided among them, with what they already have had is in full of their parts of my estate.

5. I give to my daughter Priscilla LeBaron two hundred sixty-six pounds, thirteen shillings and four pence, to be paid to her by my Executors: also one-half of the pewter in the kitchen: also a bed, well furnished, table, chairs, looking-glass, etc.: also the use of the green-painted chamber so long as she remains unmarried, and a privilege in the cellar, kitchen, garret, etc.: also a seat in my pew in the meeting-house, all as her part of my estate in full: also I order that five cords of wood be brought to the house yearly, and every year, for her use till she is married.

6. I give to my granddaughter Sarah Hazen wife of Mr. Hazen, daughter of my son Joseph LeBaron, dec'd, fifty Spanish milled dollars, which is in full of her father's part of my estate.

7. I give my son-in-law Elkanah Cushman a suit of clothes and his board with me.

8. I give to my four sons I had by my last wife, viz.: Isaac LeBaron, Lemuel LeBaron, Francis LeBaron, William LeBaron, their heirs and assigns forever, all the residue of my estate, real or personal, not already disposed of, wherever lying or being, in this Government, or in any other Government, of what name or nature soever.

9. I also nominate, ordain and appoint my two sons, viz.: Isaac LeBaron of Boston, and Lemuel LeBaron of Rochester, to be my executors of this my last Will and Testament, hereby revoking and disannulling and declaring void all other former Wills by me heretofore made, declaring this to be my last Will and Testament, as witness my hand and seal this twenty-fourth day of September, one thousand, seven hundred and seventy-two 1772.

Signed, sealed, pronounced, published and declared to be his Will and Testament, in presence of FRANCIS[2] LEBARON (Francis[1]), born June 13, 1701; died Aug. 6, 1731; married Nov. 23, 1721, Sarah, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Griswold) Bartlett.* His widow married (2), Jan. 21, 1736, Joseph Swift. Francis LeBaron resided in the house in Plymouth, Mass., formerly occupied by his father, Dr. Francis LeBaron, on the site of which "Davis Hall" now stands. The inventory of his estate amounted to £378: 8: 10, including items of things "in his Cooper's shop in Plymouth," besides £46: 13: 4, cash due from his brother James, being one-third of the value of "the farm given to James by his honoured father." He apparently died intestate, as his brother Lazarus,[2] and Samuel Bartlett, "Merchant," were appointed administrators, and "Return Waite, Taylor," was one of their sureties.

It would appear from documents on file in Plymouth Probate Records, cited below, that all the children of Francis[1] did not receive their full portions of his estate when his widow, their step-mother, married again. More than fifteen years after their father's death the sons agreed among themselves on the appointment of appraisers of his real property, as will be seen by the following agreement from the Probate files:

as also for ye. prising the Lands & houses in the —on of plymth we make choise of Captn. Dier & Mr. Stephen Churchell

This estate had been included in the appraisal made shortly after the death of Francis,[1] but for some reason unknown the second appraisal apparently did not prove satisfactory to the heirs, and did not result in a division. In the Memorial given below, which has no date but presumably made not long after the agreement, Francis[2] applied for an accounting and to have the house included in his portion set off to him. The Court accordingly appointed, June 16, 1723, "Jacob Tomson, Benony Lucas and John Dyer" to make a third appraisal of the lands and houses; they made return two days later, as the result of which Francis[2] seems to have been given the house in which he afterwards resided, and other property.

MEMORIAL OF FRANCIS LEBARON, JR.

To the Hon Isaac Winslow Esq. Judg of Probaits of Wills in the County of Plymouth etc: the memorial of ffrancis LeBaron of Plymouth in the county aforesd son to ffrancis LeBaron of Plymouth aforesd Deceased. Humbly Sheweth that his honoured father maiking

a will, said will being on record in the sd office, in which there was a residuary Legacy Bequeathed to your memorialist and it was uncertane and still remains uncertane. Besid there hath been money goods and chattles taiken into the Possestion and Improvement of the other Legatees and Improved to there one use: and the Law of the Province made in the fifth year of King William & Queen Mary Provids that uncertane legacies must be reduced to a certanety and how, now may it please your honor the case is thus: there was but a dark and perplext account that the Executor had. Our Honoured mother being Concerned obliged us to a tenderness with her and for her saik made up the affare with as little to do as possable hoping upon a good according amoungst ourselfs (& withall knowing that by the will we cood not be in a worss Condition than If our mother had not married) and to the settling of the estate for it was to be at her Deceas or second marage. however the beginning of December 1722 we maid up with the Executr & since our Indeavours have been to settle it among ourselfs but as yett Cannot Effect it nor no probability that ever we shall. Now we having all of us taken of the estate into our hands we become all of us accountable to each other as I Humbly Conceive: and when any is agreved the law maid in the fourth year of King William the Third seemes to putt the Case, into the Judges hand besids the law maid in the twelveth year of sd Reign Provides in such a Case: your memorialist is agreved becaus things are not reduced to a sertanety that the estate may be settled. Your memorialist humbly prays your honour wood Exert your Power to Call James LeBarron and Lazarus LeBaron to your memorialist to account of there receivings & Improvement of sd Estate that thereby it may be reduced to a Sertanety and your memorialist is ready to add to his account what he has since Recevd and when this is Don and the land Inventoried I Doubt not but that we shall Quickly Come to a good settlement. However If your honour is of another mind I pray you to request an account of Lazarus LeBaron by vertue of this Bond. for before I Discharged the Exr (fearing the worst) I tooke this bond whereby If need required to Charg him. I wood Intreat your Honour to be as Speedy as with Conveniancy Can be, be cause I am Destitute of a house and out of that estate there will be a house Come to me but that which at present is as it were set aside for me wants abundance to be don to it to make it tenantable. & your memorialist shall ever pray as in duty bound etc

JOHN[4] LEBARON (John[3]), born April 10, 1750, in Middleboro, Mass.; died May 30, 1836, in Hoosick, N. Y.; married Dec. 3, 1772, in Middleboro, Repentance Lucas. The inscription on his gravestone in the old burial-ground in Hoosick, says that he died May 30, 1836, aged 81 years, which would make the date of his birth 1755. We have good authority for saying that the inscription, as to his age at the time of his death, is incorrect, and the records in Middleboro give his birth in 1750. He served in the Revolutionary War, and in the "Report from the Secretary of War, U. S. Pensioners, 1835," page 403, we have the date of the commencement of John LeBaron's pension for service in the Mass. militia, as "Mar. 4, 1831," and age "81."

We have been able to obtain very little definite information in regard to the descendants of this John LeBaron. The record of the family of his son Abizer, we have with more or less fullness, but we fear in many cases, not with entire accuracy. We think it best to publish whatever fragments we have secured, hoping that they may serve as clues at least, for other genealogical searchers.

Children:

110. i. Abizer,[5] b. about 1779.
ii. Alden, b. ——; m. Jemima Coon.
iii. John, b. 1785; m. Eunice ——, d. Dec. 25, 1833; m. (2) Amy Otis.
iv. Linus, b. ——.
v. Sally, b. ——.
vi. Polly, b. ——.

23

ZEBULON[4] LEBARON (John[3]), born Dec. 6, 1752; married Nov. 2, 1773, Elizabeth Lucas. He died previous to 1793. The Records in the Probate Office at Plymouth say: "1793, William Hunt was appointed Guardian of Samuel LeBaron, son of Zebulon LeBaron." He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War; emigrated to New York.

Child:

111. i. Samuel,[5] b. Dec. 27, 1776.

It is thought by some descendants of Samuel[5] LeBaron that he had sisters Olive and Rebecca.

APPENDIX.

As was stated on page 10, the compiler proposes to give in this Appendix some of the varying traditions concerning the first Francis LeBaron, particularly in regard to his religious faith (regarding which, as already mentioned, different branches of the families of his descendants have held different theories), and brief notes on the accounts of his first appearance in America. It is not proposed to advocate the correctness of either of the divergent accounts, but only to state some of their various phases. These have been gathered from diverse sources, and we give the authorities on which they are based.

That Francis LeBaron was a surgeon on a French privateer, and wrecked on the New England coast, has been persistently believed by all who have given attention to his history. However far family traditions may wander, in their version of some interesting incident, from the original or correct account of what actually took place, it has been found that they generally have some basis of truth on which to rest. This particular story of a French privateer, for example, has been constantly preserved by those who have forgotten, if they ever knew, that just at the time she is said to have been wrecked, the war between William III, king of England, and Louis XIV of France, which followed soon after the accession of the former, had not been closed by the Peace of Ryswick (which was signed in 1697). This would at least establish the fact that the appearance of a hostile vessel on the shores of Buzzard's Bay, at the period of the reported wreck, was not improbable.

That Francis was a skillful surgeon, his brief life in Massachusetts gives ample proof, and needs no further comment; while the story of the dress-sword, such as might be worn by an officer of his reputed rank, the ownership of which is traced with certainty directly to Francis by a lineal descendant, affords what may be thought cumulative testimony on this point.

In a letter written in 1870, by Sirrell C. LeBaron, of Tecumseh, Mich., a great-grandson of James (2), son of Francis, occurs the following inquiry: —

> Did you see in the inventory any mention of a dress sword, as having belonged to him? — for I well remember when four or five years old having played with a three-edged sword with rich guard, which my father said was brought over to this country by my forefather. It was of peculiar temper, for we used to double it up point to hilt, &c. But my father, for some reason, let a militia general, named Daggett, have it in 1810 or 1811, who was living in Calais, Vt., where my father then resided.

Another curious tradition is that which tells of the cross he is said to have worn, and which has furnished the evidence for those who believe that, in the midst of a "Pilgrim" community, Francis adhered to the Roman Catholic faith in which he had been educated; and some of his descendants tell us that he concealed this mysterious cross as carefully as he did his alien creed, and directed that it should be buried with him. On the contrary, others of the family have maintained that he was a Huguenot; that he had left his home in consequence of the revocation of the Treaty of Nantes, a few years before he appeared in America; and that while some of his friends had found refuge in England, he had either chosen to remain with those who spoke his native tongue, or was seeking a home in the New World when his vessel was wrecked. They also argue that it remains to be proved what the cross which he is said to have so carefully treasured really was. It was not so repugnant a symbol to French Protestants, or perhaps even to the Pilgrims, as it had been to the English reformers, or to Endicott and the Puritans of "the Bay."

Bearing on this question, even the material of which the cross was made — whether silver or gold — and the inferences to be drawn therefrom, have been subjects of discussion. If the cross was of gold, we are told, it probably had no reference to his creed, but might have been an ancestral relic, the badge of some knightly order of which his father or more remote relative had been a member, and precious on that account; if of silver (as we are told it was, by the descendants of his son James), it was not improbably a religious emblem, for crosses made from thin plates of silver were customarily worn by the French priests who were missionaries among the Indians, and several of that character have been exhumed from Indian graves. Some have said it was a crucifix, rather than a cross, but this does not appear to be authenticated. No one, so far as we can discover, claims to know certainly, whether it was cross or crucifix — silver or gold. The secret lies hidden in his grave.

It will be seen, from this brief summary of the questions at issue, that members of the family who have given the subject attention have reached widely different conclusions. In Mrs. Austin's books, "The Nameless Nobleman," and "Dr. LeBaron and his Daughters," we have a romantic tale, and she makes him a Romanist; her brother, Mr. John A. Goodwin, in his bright story of "The First of the LeBarons," which we print below, takes a similar view as to his faith.* Dr. Alexander LeBaron Monroe, who was a grandson of Lazarus[4] LeBaron (55), and Susannah Johonnot, of Boston, daughter of Andrew and Susannah (Olivier) Johonnot, both of Huguenot descent, in a letter written in 1870, said: "It is interesting to know that the blood of the Catholic LeBaron, the Huguenot Johonnot, both from Rochelle, France, and of Warren, the Pilgrim, from England, should so early be mixed on the shores of New England."

The legend which has come down in the family of Lazarus[4] LeBaron (55) of Sutton, Mass., agrees with the story as told by Mr. Goodwin, in nearly every particular, and probably was the source of his version. This Lazarus was twenty-nine years old when his grandfather, Dr. Lazarus[2] LeBaron (3), died, and forty when his father Lazarus,[3] the second of the name, died. He was the only child of the eldest child of Dr. Lazarus, and spent many of his early years in Plymouth. Dr. Lazarus[2] (10) was sixteen when his grandmother, Mary (Wilder) LeBaron, died, and he lived on the same street with her. These facts have furnished the strongest arguments for that form of the tradition which has come down through the line of Lazarus.

Without further preliminary we shall first give Mr. Goodwin's story, following it with versions from other sources.

* Mr. John Abbott Goodwin was a descendant of Francis[1] in the sixth generation: see p. 263 (696): for his sister, Mrs. Mary Jane (Goodwin) Austin, see (697). They were also of the fifth, through their mother (see 107 and 246).

THE FIRST OF THE LEBARONS.

"A TRUE STORY."

LOUIS PECTON had been a surgeon in the French armies. As popular prejudice would not allow of dissections in civil life, and as Harvey's discoveries were written in English, few French practitioners then knew as much of their profession as did the old women who acted as nurses, or the barbers who monopolized the use of the lancet. In his army practice, young Pecton had abundant opportunity for dissections, and for making the acquaintance of English surgeons.

When, therefore, he went to take possession of his patrimony in a suburb of Bordeaux, he was a surgeon of far greater skill and knowledge than was common at that day. He had married some years before; the parents of the parties had arranged the match, the bride and bridegroom knowing or caring little about each other, as was customary. On settling down at Bordeaux, it was with a sort of agreeable surprise that the young couple found themselves exceedingly well mated, and proceeded to fall in love with each other. Pecton practiced medicine, mainly from a sense of duty. His property was enough to support him, so that the fees, which he rigidly exacted from the rich, were systematically distributed among the poor.

One dark night, in 1668, the worthy doctor's surgery was visited by a stranger of commanding appearance, but in humble apparel. In reply to the puzzled look of the former, the stranger pushed aside his hair, pointed to a little star-shaped scar above his temple, and said: "Yes, my dear Pecton, your unspoken guess is right. But keep your seat. If you want to show me respect, do it by serving me. My life is sought, and so is that of my infant son. You know by whom! Mine he will yet have, but you must save that of my now motherless boy. He will reach your house to-night with his wet-nurse. Let him pass as your son till he grows up; then tell him what you think will be for his good. Educate him well, and see that he is trained to martial exercises. Then teach him your own noble calling. Two hundred louis-d'ors will come with him to meet the expense. He has been baptized as Francis. Honor him by giving him your own honest surname, and if he never knows any other, he will be far happier than if he bore his father's historic title. Finally, rear him as a good Catholic, and teach him to wear this cross constantly, and to have it buried with him; it may lead, in happier times, to his identification."

So saying, he handed the doctor a small but richly chased gold cross attached to an embroidered ribbon. A long, whispered consultation followed; the result was that the doctor, after conferring with his wife, accepted the trust imposed, but declaring that the little stranger should take the place of his own deceased darling, and should be made his heir, unless reclaimed by his father. The stranger sadly replied: "No! my double benefactor, that will never be. I am a doomed man, in spite of disguises and stratagems. If I am alive you shall hear from me in just one year; if you do not, you may know that I no longer live."

The stranger departed, and the doctor never heard of him again. The child arrived mysteriously, and the family adapted itself to its new circumstances without attracting outside attention. Soon after, it moved to the opposite side of the city, among strangers, who neither knew nor cared whether little Francis Pecton was the son of his nominal parents or not.

At twenty-one, Francis had a fine education as the times went, and his training had been such as his father had requested. He was the embodiment of health and good spirits, the only grief of his life having been the recent death of his supposed mother. His guardian had given him rare instruction in surgery, and had abandoned his medical practice to him, which the young man was following up with enthusiasm.

In 1693, when Francis was twenty-five years old, Dr. Pecton lay on his death-bed. In a long, last interview he revealed to his ward such portions of his history as he knew. Soon after, he departed, leaving Francis heir to his little estate. The latter, now doubly an orphan, never recovered his former light-heartedness. Something he had learned from the doctor, which cast a shadow over his spirit for life. His hereditary cross seemed now doubly precious to him, and was seldom long out of his hand.

At length, his old home becoming insupportable, he invested a part of his funds in the city; a part he distributed among the poor of his neighborhood, and with the rest he bought a share in the privateer L'Aigle. Then, assuming the name of LeBaron, as surgeon of his ship, he started out to fight the battles of Louis XIV against William and Mary. Like most privateers, L'Aigle won many ignoble victories and made some very gallant failures. At length, in 1696, while running along the New England coast, she took a look into Buzzard's Bay, and being caught there by a south-west wind, she never looked further. To bear up was impossible, and to bear away was destruction. She came to anchor, but soon the storm tore her loose and drove her upon the west coast of Falmouth. Her crew all landed safely, but the inhabitants gathered about them with extremely hostile indications. They had mistaken L'Aigle for a pirate, and were disposed to exterminate her crew at once.

After some hours of threatening, Major Bourne, a magistrate, arrived and took command. By his order the Frenchmen were received as prisoners of war, and were finally started on the route for Boston. When they came to march, it was found that the surgeon of the ship was not among the prisoners. He had landed with the crew, and had evidently escaped inland. Some of the people, first agreeing that the fugitive must be a spy, and therefore not entitled to quarter, started in pursuit.

A few miles northward stood a large, rambling house, in which Edward and Elizabeth Wilder had lived and died, and where their children now lived. The morning after the shipwreck Mary Wilder was at home alone. Her brother and his wife were away for the day, and she was spinning flax and singing psalm tunes in the big, old kitchen.

Suddenly a ragged, drabbled, excited young man rushed into the house, and in broken language asked her to protect him. Her good sense and her woman's heart roused her to efficient action. She took the fugitive to the garret, and, taking up the loose boards of the floor, exposed a deep space, bounded by the stout wooden ceiling of the room below. A few mats and sacks were thrown in, some food was provided, and Mary went to watch for the searchers. At length they appeared, examining every bush and hiding-place, far and near. Mary sent her captive into his place of refuge, and then, replacing the floor, she spread some bedding over the spot and lay down.

Soon the hunters arrived and examined the house. In the garret they found Mary tucked up on the floor, with her head bound in a towel, and a bowl of sassafras tea by her side. They tried to explain their errand, but she was "so sick" she would not listen. Ransacking the rest of the premises, they went on their way. That night Mary won her sister-in-law over to her side, and they two soon coaxed young Edward Wilder to help protect the fugitive. In the course of two weeks, the latter was well nigh forgotten by the outside world. Then Major Bourne, who had been consulted by the Wilders, volunteered to go with LeBaron to Boston, and ask that he might live in Falmouth, on parole, until exchanged.

Early one morning Major Bourne, with Wilder and LeBaron, crossed on horseback to Scusset Harbor, in Sandwich, where a boat at once started for Plymouth. At the latter place the prisoner was turned over to the selectmen, who at once put him in care of Major Bourne, until a convenient craft should be sailing to Boston.

There was then no surgeon in Plymouth, and there was a very serious case of disease requiring treatment. LeBaron volunteered to perform the operation, and by his knowledge and skill so impressed the people, that the selectmen procured his discharge as a prisoner from Lieut.-Gov. Stoughton, and persuaded him to settle in Plymouth. Dr. LeBaron's first use of his freedom was to revisit Falmouth, and bring back Mary Wilder as his wife.

How much of his history he told his wife was never revealed by her, beyond what is here recorded. To other people he said nothing. It was only known that he considered himself the victim of an official conspiracy, defrauding him hopelessly of his hereditary rights. But while this feeling made him ready to abjure his native land and all connected with it, he held steadfastly to his religion, wearing his golden cross night and day, and providing that it should not be removed at his death. Many of his new neighbors were greatly troubled that their doctor should be a devotee of Rome, and this fact much injured his influence. Indeed, he was often charged with a lack of cordiality and sociability. But the poor found him a true follower of the noble-hearted Pecton. For them his gentlest manners and most earnest efforts were ready. The remnants of his French property were reclaimed and formed into his private charity fund, and when his survivors opened his will, they found that he had bequeathed the town of Plymouth ninety acres of land for the same purpose. The prosperous complained of his brusqueness, but the weak and friendless blessed the sound of his approaching footsteps; — with them he was never impatient or indifferent, though they were sometimes ungrateful to him. With the aged he was tender, as they reminded him of his adopted father and mother. Especially was he affected when, in 1699, he soothed the last moments of Mary Allerton Cushman, who as a girl of ten years had landed from the Mayflower, and now at the age of 90 was the sole survivor of that immortal company. That the orphan of Bordeaux should have been, by such mysterious ways, brought to perform this duty, filled LeBaron's soul with awe.

Eight years of this new life passed quietly away; then, at the early age of 36, the exile made his last journey. The visitor to Burial Hill in Plymouth may still see the gravestone which Mary Wilder had to import from England, and on it he may read:

HERE LYES Y^e BODY | OF MR FRANCIS LEBARRAN | PHYTICIAN WHO | DEPARTED THIS LIFE | AUG^ST Y^e 8. 1704. | IN Y^e 36. YEAR | OF HIS AGE

A third of a century afterward, loving hands laid Mary Wilder by the side of her long-lost husband. Her son had then for many years been his father's successor as "the beloved physician" of Plymouth, and her grandson was fitting himself for the same high position when his turn should come. All in this country who bear the name LeBaron are of this stock,* and so are many more, who, through intermarriages with the descendants of Bradford, Standish, Alden, Howland, and Southworth, bear widely different names. Few of them know of the romance which surrounds their French ancestor, and none of them can unravel its mysteries. One of the number has herein told all that he can learn of the matter, and it amounts to little more concerning its hero than this — "He was the First of the LeBarons."

OTHER VERSIONS.

We next present an account from a grandson of Francis,[1] Dr. Lemuel[8] LeBaron (18), written on his eighty-third birthday — Sept. 12 (N. S., or 1, O. S.), 1830, — and giving the tradition as he had received it. He held the opinion that his ancestor was a member of the Roman church:

"It may be some gratification to families which bear the name of LeBaron to know something about their descent.

* Mr. Goodwin was mistaken in this statement. A certain C. L. LeBaron was wrecked on the coast of Florida in the latter part of the 18th century, and has descendants living in Mobile, Ala., and vicinity. We also find in 1634–5, "a young man, named LeBaron" was with a party of Jesuit Fathers, who were establishing missions among the Hurons. See "The Jesuit Relations and Allied Documents." There is however nothing to show that he remained in America, or married here.

"The first of the name known in this country was Francis LeBaron, who was the surgeon of a French privateer in the war which existed in the reign of William and Mary, of England, and Louis XIV, of France, which terminated in the peace of Ryswick, 1698, after having raged eight years. The privateer, through stress of weather or some other cause, fell into Buzzard's Bay, and was shipwrecked on a ledge of rocks near the western shore of the town of Sandwich; the ship was lost, the crew saved. This took place about the year 1696.

"The event alarmed the adjacent towns. 'The French are landing,' was the cry. The militia and a mixed multitude, armed and unarmed, ran to the spot; they saw the French drawn up on the shore, completely armed, who made signs of surrender, but were not understood until a clergyman appeared, who pinned a white handkerchief to his cane and, lifting it up, marched toward the armed host. He was soon met by a flag; good treatment was promised, a surrender took place, and the captives were marched off to Plymouth, and soon, by the Governor's orders, were escorted to Boston and sent in a cartel to their own country.

"The doctor was left at Plymouth, sick with a slow fever. The clergyman took compassion on the disconsolate captive and stranger, and treated him with much kindness and hospitality. Francis recovered, and through the kindness of the minister and his success in some cases considered almost desperate, he acquired the reputation of a skillful physician, and his practice became very extensive. He married Hannah Wilder, of Hingham. He embraced the Protestant faith, but was fond of his crucifix, which he wore suspended in his bosom to the day of his death, which was very sudden and took place about the year 1704, when he was aged thirty-six years.

"It appears by the Inventory of his estate that his lands in Plymouth and Middleboro exceeded a thousand acres, and were appraised £515."

Dr. James Thacher, of Plymouth, Mass., (1754–1844,) has the following account, in his "American Medical Biographies," published in 1828. It gives us the legend as he very likely heard it in the home of Francis.[1] The closing sentence is probably somewhat mythical, for it is hardly to be supposed that the surgeon would have needlessly offended the feelings of those who were sincerely attached to him, by a constant reminder of that "which they abhorred:" —

NOTES OF A SERMON BY REV. LEMUEL LEBARON.

MARTHA H. (LeBARON) GODDARD.
1829-1888.

"Dr. Francis LeBaron, a native of France, in the year 1696, was surgeon to a privateer, fitted out of Bordeaux, cruising on the American coast, which was wrecked at Buzzard's Bay. The crew were carried prisoners to Boston. The surgeon, the subject of this notice, came to Plymouth, and having performed a surgical operation, and the town being at that time destitute of a physician, the selectmen petitioned the executive, Lieutenant-Governor Stoughton, for his liberation, that he might settle in the town. This was granted, and he married and practiced physic during life in Plymouth, where he died in 1704. . . . . Dr. LeBaron did not relinquish the Roman Catholic religion, and was so strongly attached to the cross, that he never retired to rest without placing it on his breast; this constantly reminded the people of a religion which they abhorred, and which they were scarcely willing to tolerate, even in a single instance."

Mrs. Martha H.[5] (LeBaron) Goddard (see 85, ix), contributed to the New England Hist. Gen. Register,* for April, 1871, an article from which we take the following: —

"The name LeBaron was first known in this country in the year 1694. In the autumn of that year a French privateer, cruising on the American coast, was wrecked in Buzzard's Bay, near Falmouth. The officers and crew were taken prisoners and marched to Boston. In Plymouth, Francis LeBaron, the surgeon of the ship, was detained by sickness. He could not speak English; the people about him could not speak French; but Dr. John Cotton, the minister of the town, talked with him in Latin, and became interested in him.

"He performed, what seemed at that time, a wonderful surgical operation on the landlady of the inn; and as there was no physician in Plymouth, the selectmen of the town petitioned Lieut.-Gov. Stoughton, the acting Governor, that Dr. LeBaron might be 'permitted to tarry in the town of Plymouth.' The petition was granted, and he practiced medicine and surgery there till his death. He was a Roman Catholic, and always wore a cross upon his breast. . . . .

* If Mrs. Goddard is correct in her account, that part of the tradition which says the privateer sailed from Bordeaux (and which is often repeated), requires that the evidence which sustains it should be cited. None has been adduced, to our knowledge, nor do we know of anything to show that Francis was of Rochelle, as is sometimes claimed.

"There is no record or even tradition of his life before his arrival in Plymouth. No record can be found of the privateer, or of the port from which she sailed; only the fact of the shipwreck and of the highly educated Frenchman, of peculiar and decided character, who tarried in the little Pilgrim town, where he was an alien in speech, and an alien in religion, for less than ten years, and then died. . . . . A cloud of mystery and romance surrounds his life."

Mr. Philip[5] Battell (336), a grandson of Elizabeth[3] (LeBaron) Robbins (17), herself a daughter of Dr. Lazarus[2] LeBaron, in reply to the preceding article, wrote as follows, under date of April 19, 1871:

"I have noticed Mrs. Goddard's article in the 'Hist. Gen. Register,' giving the first three generations of the LeBaron family. I do not accede to the idea of there being no tradition of the history of the first ancestor, before his arrival in Buzzard's Bay. With us, the tradition of his previous condition was always familiar, — in fact, the main thing about him; the story closing up, as to our interest, with his establishment at Plymouth.

"His religious style is not to be implied, without evidence, from an apparently popular statement, like Thacher's. His position seems natural to me, as Protestant, without his making a profession: the same, probably, with that of many other business persons of the time, of lineage and social position.

"The romance attaching to him is that of the Huguenots, and his personal qualities theirs."

In a letter written to Capt. Nathaniel[6] Goodwin (666), Mr. Battell discussed the matter more at length; this is printed below: —

"MIDDLEBURY, VT., May 2, 1871.

"My Dear Sir, — Your letter . . . . . has just taken my attention, and given me much gratification. . . . . The point is, not to reconcile the truth with inferences of ingenuity which discredit it, but with the facts related to it. It is quite easy to see that a statement imparted to Mr. Cotton, merely, might survive the French physician, even outside his own family line, and drop into it again, even through the ministerial succession of Dr. Robbins. . . . . .

"Of course a fact of that kind, — you see I am supposing you to have the tradition, — might be otherwise transmitted to the refugee's wife or other intimates; but only a share of the community would apprehend it so as to retain it. How many people now understand that Louis XIV allowed the imprisonment of Protestant youth, and their confinement in schools and convents, to be educated as Catholics; that the atrocious Mortara system was the rule of administration in his day? I venture to say, not half a dozen, from Buzzard's Bay to Provincetown. Less, at the time, would retain an impression of such a fact after one generation, or comprehend an incident related to it. A few possibly would, and in a single line of transmission the incidental circumstances might come to the light.

"I knew a French physician in Sheffield, a marked man in his way. Popularly, we did not know his story. His name is now scarcely remembered among the people;* but Hinman,† I see, knew something of him from his more intelligent neighbors. I presume Dr. Bradford, the minister, understood his case (possibly through a profane medium, if the Frenchman told it himself), but he had intelligence to understand it, as, if related to foreign society, the people had not. . . . .

"My grandmother's tradition was that her grandfather was of Protestant parentage; was confined in a Jesuit college to be educated as a priest; that he escaped over the wall of the convent to the sea-coast, got aboard a ship and was landed in this country.‡ I recollect a particular instance of hearing this from her; the fuller statement, in incidental ways and shapes, I heard from my mother; and of the Latin talks with the minister, also, from my grandmother. The tale, with us, was more familiarly referred to, as more interesting than that of my grandfather's chaplaincy in the Revolution, and the Dedham tradition of my father's ancestry was 'nowhere.' The story tallies beautifully with the history of the time — with its own consistency. It should, perhaps, have been known to others; but I doubt if any cousins of mine know

* In "History of Berkshire," published in 1829 (see "Sheffield," by Rev. James Bradford), in the list of physicians appears the name of John E. Le Faugeu, a native of France.

† Hinman, in "Early Puritan Settlers of the Colony of Connecticut."

‡ The tradition quoted by Mr. Battell offers no explanation as to how the young but unwilling candidate for Jesuit priesthood acquired his surgical skill and medical knowledge, or his naval rank. That he was a doctor whose service was valued, is proved by documentary evidence, cited below, and that he came on the privateer is a point on which all traditions agree.

they have Bradford blood, being born of Gentile women,* or know their grandfather Robbins was a chaplain at all.

"It is doubtless true as it was transmitted; so far the privateer carried it, and in as handsome or independent line of probability as could be desired. As I once before intimated to you, the theory of his refugee character is the proper solution of his remaining at all; the mystery of this character, if it were made such, is solved by his relation to this State [colonies] as a prisoner who might be claimed. In a secluded yet populous and agreeable place, with the evident favor of the clergy, and the probable connivance of the Government, he was permitted to stay; and if afterwards, as you suppose, in correspondence with his friends, his secret might remain undisturbed, as his seclusion would remain perpetual..... The cross is no bother. The illiberality of party was long passed with cultivated Puritans.....

"Smiles's book on the Huguenots is a pleasant one, and gives a good background to our LeBaron tradition. He mentions a Prof. Baron, a Huguenot, early, from Etampes, near Paris.† The name might be the same, de-Gallicized. I think French works on biography or genealogy, — possibly of Huguenot history, — might show the family locality.

"If you have not immense leisure as well as immeasurable patience, you will wish the emigrant's line had failed in me at 36!...."

Under date of October 21, 1871, Mr. Battell wrote again: —

"The question in dispute between the family tradition and the popular impression of his religious attachments, as Thacher records it, is a less delicate one in our time than it may have been when first presented. But its more romantic character, in the original form, tallies certainly with the Huguenot history of the period, and is sustained by the probabilities of the case, in his losing all papal affinities so readily in an absorption among strangers."

* Dr. James Robbins, of Uxbridge, should be an exception to this.—P. B.

† "Baron, Peter — Professor in the University of Cambridge about 1575. He was originally from Etampes, France, and fled to England after the massacre of St. Bartholomew [Aug. 24, 1572]. He died in England, leaving behind him an only son, Samuel, who practiced medicine and died at Lyme-Regis, Norfolk." (From "The Huguenots," by Smiles, p. 398: Harpers, New York, 1868).

In a "Note" made by the Huguenot Society of New York to the article above, on "LeBaron Family," by Mrs. Martha LeBaron Goddard, from the N. E. Hist. Gen. Register, quoting what Mrs. Goddard says ["He was a Roman Catholic"], the writer goes on to remark: "This is a mistake, as the best known writers say that he was a Huguenot, and was a prisoner on the ship. He was buried in the Huguenot burial-ground, and there is no cross above his grave. Had he been a Roman Catholic, he would not have been allowed to be buried in 'unconsecrated ground.'* Baird, Potter and Russell give him as among the Huguenot refugees."

The secretary of the French Huguenot Society, when in this country in 1885, at the bi-centennial of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, said that LeBaron was a wholly Huguenot name.

That Francis was a physician is established by the following extract:

"At A town Meeting held Att plimouth Sept. 14th 1696 — At this Meeting the town Agreed upon the Raising of Moneys for the defraying the town Charges which is as followeth In primis for —

"To ffrench doctor for Care of Hunters wife . . 05 : 00 : 00"

[Records of Town of Plymouth.]

"In 1694 there was no surgeon in Plymouth, and the wife of Goodman Hunter is said to have been in much suffering for want of one. A French privateer had just been wrecked in Buzzard's Bay; and her

* It is but fair to say that the force of this note is not strengthened by its reference to "unconsecrated ground," for at the time of his death there had been no possibility of consecrating ground in Plymouth in accordance with the Roman ritual. On the other hand, had Francis been generally known as a Roman Catholic, some of his fellow-citizens might perhaps have objected to his interment beside their relatives; however this may be, there was no clergyman of the Roman Church to "allow" or object to his burial there, and moreover "Burial Hill" was not "the Huguenot burial ground," but the ancient cemetery of Plymouth, open to all its citizens, and consecration was a ceremony unknown to the residents. We know of no writer who mentions "a cross above his grave;" his mysterious cross, it is said, was buried with him. The statement that he was "a prisoner on the ship" lacks confirmation; it seems to be a modification of the tradition that he was made a prisoner on landing, with the rest of the crew, and "the best known writers" have no positive evidence to confirm or disprove their theory.

accomplished surgeon, only twenty-six years old, was Francis LeBaron, supposed to be the scion of some Huguenot family then in disfavor, and bearing an assumed name. While in Plymouth, on his way to Boston as a prisoner-of-war, he heard of Goodwife Hunter's case, and treated it with great success. The selectmen procured his release by Lieutenant-Governor Stoughton, and his settlement at Plymouth as their surgeon. He married Mary Wilder of Hingham, September, 1695, and died nine years later at Plymouth, where his quaint headstone on Burial Hill is remarkable for its beautiful finish and preservation."*

[Pilgrim Republic, by John A. Goodwin.]

"The arrival [of Francis] at Plymouth could not have been earlier than 1694; for it was in that year that Sir William Phipps was removed from the office of Governor, and Lieut.-Governor Stoughton placed in power. Nor could it have been later than January, 1695, for in that month Dr. LeBaron appears in the records as the witness to a deed from Thomas to William Clark." †

[Boston Advertiser, April, 1881, signed by the initials of W. T. Davis, Plymouth.]

"Elizabeth [grandchild of Francis[1] LeBaron] who married Ammi Ruhamah Robbins, of Norfolk, Ct., was often heard by her grandchild, Mrs. James Humphrey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., now living (1883), to say that Francis was a Huguenot."

[Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth, Davis.]

The question has been asked, as if to discredit the tradition, How could Francis LeBaron, whether only passing through Plymouth, or even if a resident there, have met Mary Wilder in that town, when she was of a Hingham family? It may be said in reply, that her parents had been dead for some years previous to her marriage; but two of her elder sisters had married and were settled in Plymouth,‡ and it is quite probable that Mary was also living there, in the family of one of these.

---

* Mr. Goodwin in this work took the opposite view, as to the faith of Francis, from that which he held when his story was written, many years before; he here gives the conclusions he had reached after a more careful study.

† William Clark was husband of Abia, sister of Mary Wilder.

LEBARON ESTATES IN PLYMOUTH.

We give here some information gleaned from "Davis's Ancient Landmarks," and notes from Mrs. Austin, relating to LeBaron property in Plymouth.:

The lot on which Davis Hall stands was conveyed in 1697 by William and Joseph Bradford, sons of Gov. Bradford, to Nathaniel Howland, and in the same year by him to Dr. Francis LeBaron. After his marriage in 1721, Francis, the youngest son of Dr. Francis, occupied the house which his father built upon this lot, till the time of his death in 1731. In 1733 Samuel Bartlett and Lazarus LeBaron, administrators on his estate, sold it to his widow, Sarah LeBaron, who afterward married Joseph Swift, and she lived there till 1763.

[Ancient Landmarks.]

The lot on which the Baptist church, on Leyden Street, stands, was sold in 1703 by William Shurtleff to Francis LeBaron, who, before his death in the next year, built what was later known as the "Old Tavern House." It afterwards came into the possession of Lazarus LeBaron, son of Francis, who sold it in 1765 to his son-in-law, Nathaniel Goodwin. It remained in the Goodwin family till 1857. In the next few years it changed hands a number of times until, in 1865, the present Baptist church was built upon it.

[Ancient Landmarks.]

In 1725 Dr. Lazarus LeBaron bought the old Cotton parsonage lot and house, corner of LeBaron Alley and Leyden Street, of his stepfather, Return Waite..... Lazarus took down the Cotton house and built himself a new one, to which he moved, on selling the Tavern House to Nathaniel Goodwin. Old Dr. Lazarus died in the house which he built. LeBaron Alley was laid out by Lazarus LeBaron and James Rickard, each giving half of the land.

[From notes made by Mrs. Jane Goodwin Austin.]

Lazarus LeBaron, in 1738, bought land north of what is now Samoset Street, holding it until his death in 1773, when, in the division of his estate, that part which is now occupied by the Samoset House was set off to his son William, and the remainder, including Cushman Street and all lots on both sides of it, to his son Isaac.

[Ancient Landmarks.]

The New England Historic Genealogical Register (IV: 367) mentions that on the first celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, Dec. 22, 1770, Dr. LeBaron of that town presented to the Old Colony Club a large and venerable chair, formerly possessed by Gov. William Bradford, in which the President was seated. This chair is now in the possession of Mr. William Hedge, of Plymouth, both he and his wife being of the LeBaron descendants.

INDEX.

THE numbers against the names refer to the pages where the names occur. A name has but a single reference to the page on which it appears, though it may be repeated there; care should therefore be taken to look for such repetition.

Middle names are indicated by initials only (for example, Mary Amelia and Mary Anna are both indexed under Mary A.); when given in full, they show the surname (maiden or otherwise) at the time of marriage; where the context shows that this surname is the maiden name, it is parenthesized; otherwise the parentheses are omitted.
